

TERMS OF ADVERTISING. One Square, 10 Lines, 10 Days, $1.00. Two Squares, 10 Lines, 10 Days, $1.50. Three Squares, 10 Lines, 10 Days, $2.00. One Column, 10 Lines, 10 Days, $3.00.

RAILROAD TIME TABLE. DECHERD, TENN. NORTH. No. 2 Leaves 3:45 p.m. No. 4 " 10:45 a.m. No. 6 " 9:15 a.m. SOUTH. No. 1 Leaves 11:57 a.m. No. 3 " 4:20 a.m. No. 5 " 7:30 p.m.

Read Coroner Weddington's election notice. Marriage is honorable, says an old proverb, but it brings lots of trouble.

The Rev. Dr. Howard will preach at Trinity Church Thursday evening next at 8 o'clock.

M. C. Forbes, special commissioner, advertises valuable lands for sale. See advertisement.

Prof. Bonnie Marshall, who has been teaching music for the past year or two in Texarkana, Texas, has been with us for several days.

Miss Mary Finney Scott, of New Orleans, is spending the summer in our town, the guest of her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Slatter.

FOUND.—Last Friday night, on High street, by Prof. A. Jordan, a gold bracelet, which the owner can get by describing it and paying for this notice.

Mr. John Simmons has nearly recovered his health. He has been out buggy riding several times lately. No better man than John Simmons ever lived, and while he is already one of our ablest lawyers, if he keeps his health he will soon rank second to none in the State.

Miss Ada Pennington, daughter of Mr. Graves Pennington, who had been sick for several weeks, died last Saturday morning, and her remains were interred Sunday morning. She was a most estimable young lady. Her parents and brothers and sisters have our sympathies.

Will Burkes, a negro boy, about 16 years of age, burglarized Mr. R. C. Handley's store last week, and carried off a watch and chain. He traded the chain to a young man in town. Mr. Sim Venable saw the chain, and told the wearer it was very much like one in their show-case. He went in to compare them, and discovered that the chain and a watch were missing. The negro was arrested, and the watch recovered. A trial was had before Esq. Forbes, and Will was sent down to board at Hotel d'Arledge until Circuit Court, when he will, no doubt, be ordered to represent Franklin county in the Tracy City coal mines for a few years.

Capt. Pryor N. Harris and wife, of Galveston, Texas, spent a few days in our town since our last, the guests of Capt. A. C. Plumlee, who is first cousin to the Captain. Capt. Harris is a son of the great humorist of by-gone days, George W. Harris, (better known as Sut Lovengood,) of Knoxville, Tenn. In the late war he commanded a company in Sturges' regiment of cavalry, and was known to the members of that command as Capt. Sut Harris. At the close of the war he was in command of McBride's cavalry, and not being satisfied with the terms of surrender between Lee and Grant, they made their way into Mexico and joined Maximilian's army, where they remained until his defeat and overthrow, when they returned to Texas and settled. Capt. Harris and wife will spend the summer in the Northern Lake region—perhaps in Wisconsin.

The Home Journal wishes to employ someone to write obituary notices, marriage notices, and notices of school examinations. We will give such persons a little help in the last-named effort. We will tell him to reproduce what has been said for the last twenty years or more—that "every piece on the programme was well done, and of each and all it might be truthfully said that they evinced the most careful and conscientious training and the most thorough teaching." Then a little about the Latin Salutatory, the French Address, and a lot of stuff to make an outsider believe the student really knows something of her or his own tongue, and all will be well. The graduate will go forth with a diploma and yet not be able to compete with a smart newsboy of five years' experience.

As to obituary notices, we must fall back upon necessity. We cannot afford to print them unless paid for them just as the undertaker is paid for his work. In this case we will not care how many virtues your pen may allow to the departed one. The pay you give us will make us oblivious to whether you tell the truth or not.

As to marriage notices, excuse us if you add any purloined poetry. Five lines gratis, unless a large amount of cake is sent.

"WINE OF CARDUI" makes rosy cheeks and clear complexion. J. M. Hutchins' or G. G. Phillips'.

Good plasterers' laths for sale by G. G. Phillips.

WANTED! 100 cords of 4-foot wood at the Woolen Mills. Will pay cash for it in goods. JAMES M. GRIFFIN. Sept. 9th, 1882.

Cowan Items.

Hot and dry. Thermometer high up in 90's. Foundation of the new school building laid, and work progressing. Other improvements going on in Cowan.

Married—At the residence of the bride's father, in Grundy county, by G. R. Smart, Esq., Dr. G. W. Pearson, of Cowan, to Miss Mattie Nunley. We wish the happy couple all the happiness this life affords.

Married—At the Christian Church, in this place, 22d inst., by Rev. Mr. Lipscomb, Mr. George Shook, of Tracy City, to Miss Mary Gilliam, of Sewanee. They boarded the first train for Tracy City.

The change in the Winchester Woolen Mills advertisement will be made in time for our next issue. Mr. Yates, the new partner, who is a striving man, is overhauling the old machinery and putting in new looms.

Fruit Cans!

All kinds, cheap, at J. F. Vaughan's. Take "BLACK-DRAGHT" and you will never be bilious. At J. M. Hutchins' or G. G. Phillips.

Ex-Gov. Marks was, beyond all question, the choice of a majority of the delegates to the late Democratic Convention, but he positively declined the honor, yet said he would work for the nominee of the Convention. That nominee is the gallant Wm. B. Tate.

The platform may not be all right, but the candidate is. We accept the candidate on first principles and the platform as—the best we can do.

Graham Bro's plasterers' laths for sale by G. G. Phillips.

From the 17th District. Wheat harvest is about over, and the farmers are well pleased with the turnout.

Oats are looking fine, and will be ready to cut in about ten days. There is to be a grand picnic and 4th of July celebration on the flat at Claybrite Springs. Free to all.

The summer sojourners are repairing their cabins, preparatory to their occupancy this summer. This is about the time of year they generally make a big blow about building a mammoth hotel, which always withers and dies at the touch of the first frost, only to spring alive again when the mercury ranges about 90°.

It is just as necessary when you insure your property to be certain you select a good company, as it is to be certain you do not take counterfeit as good money. Wm. J. Slatter represents the companies you should insure in.

MASONIC. Stated meeting of Cumberland Lodge No. 158, F. and A. M., next Saturday night, July 1st, 1882. Important business. A full attendance requested.

By order of the W. M. H. H. DULIN, Secretary. THE PHENIX, of Hartford; THE ETNA, of Hartford; THE KNOXVILLE FIRE, of Knoxville, Tenn.

Three better Fire Insurance Companies cannot be found. Represented by WM. J. SLATTER. Policies issued at once on all ordinary risks.

For Congress. We are authorized to announce A. L. Landis, Sr., of Bedford county, as a candidate for Congress from this (the 5th) Congressional District, composed of the counties of Cannon, Coffee, Franklin, Lincoln, Moore, Marshall, Bedford and Rutherford. Election, Tuesday, Nov. 7th.

We are authorized to announce Hon. Richard Warner as a candidate for re-election to Congress from this, the 5th, Congressional District.

TO THE PUBLIC. I have this day closed out my entire interest with the firm of Lechenan Bros., to brother Joe, who will continue the business in his own name. All who are indebted to the old firm will please call and settle at once. Thanking the public for favors shown us, I am, respectfully, PETER LENEHAN, Decherd, Tenn., June 1st, 1882.

Ladies and Gentlemen: With regret that I have to give up my interest in the business in my own name. You will always find me on hand with a first-class stock of Staple Dry Goods, Hardware, Groceries, &c.; Ladies' Misses, Children's and Infants' Shoes and Hosiery, Gents' Clothing, (all styles—$1.50 to $30) Hats, (pobby, straw, felt, soft—all colors) hand Hats (large and small sizes), Neckwear—22 styles, all of best make, Gents' Alexander Kids, Keop's Collars, Cuffs and Silk Umbrellas, Jewelry good enough for any lady, and an excellent line for gentlemen.

Agent for the Chattanooga Chilled Plow; also, for the "Queen Coffee Pot" and Zeigler Bro's celebrated Boots and Shoes. My terms will continue the same—CASH. Thanking you for past favors, with continuance of same I am ever, faithfully, &c. JOE LENEHAN, Decherd, June 14th, 1882.

Forty years' trial has proved "BLACK-DRAGHT" the best liver medicine in the world. At J. M. Hutchins' or G. G. Phillips.

Good plasterers' laths for sale by G. G. Phillips.

WANTED! 100 cords of 4-foot wood at the Woolen Mills. Will pay cash for it in goods. JAMES M. GRIFFIN. Sept. 9th, 1882.

Good plasterers' laths for sale by G. G. Phillips.

Good plasterers' laths for sale by G. G. Phillips.

Good plasterers' laths for sale by G. G. Phillips.

Good plasterers' laths for sale by G. G. Phillips.

Land in Franklin County.

According to the last assessment there are 343,972 acres of land in Franklin county, divided as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Dist. and Acres. 1. 218138, 2. 20969, 3. 16863, 4. 30498, 5. 23578, 6. 60114, 7. 17173, 8. 18262, 9. 21674, 10. 23233, 11. 12531, 12. 35580, 13. 33237, 14. 10156, 15. 27023, 16. 14804, 17. 7373.

MARRIED—June 22d, 1882, at the residence of the bride's father, near East Springs, in this county, by Rev. J. L. Payne, Mr. W. B. Gray to Miss Dovey Beaver. Friend Gray and his bride have our best wishes for happiness and prosperity.

Chancery Court is in session—Judge Jno. W. Burton presiding. A number of prominent lawyers from abroad are in attendance.

A tribute to the memory of Miss Ada Pennington was received too late for this issue. It will appear in our next.

There is an ordinance forbidding the running at large of horses and mules upon our streets. Why is it not enforced?

The protracted meeting at the C. P. Church is still progressing. We hope much good will come from it.

We are prepared to fill orders for election tickets with promptness. Positively no credit.

Rev. W. W. Pinson, former pastor of the M. E. Church here, now stationed at McMinnville, is assisting in the protracted meeting at the C. P. Church here.

Mrs. Chas. Coleman and Mrs. James Campbell, of our town, are quite sick, but we hope they may soon recover.

Johnnie Hutchins is a good chemist, and a better man never lived, but he'll never succeed as a tooth-doctor, especially if he talks to all his patients as he did to us the other day.

Minnie Doty, the beautiful little niece of Mrs. C. P. Baird, died last Friday. Her remains were taken to Iowa (her mother's former home) for interment.

Cherry, O'Conner & Co., lessees of the Tennessee penitentiary, have been awarded a contract for 600 wagons for the use of the Indian Bureau.

Election Notice.

In compliance with the election laws of Tennessee, I will, on Thursday, the 31st day of August, 1882, open and hold an election at the regular voting places in each civil district of Franklin county, for the purpose of electing a Sheriff, Trustee, County Court Clerk, Circuit Court Clerk, Register, Justices of the Peace and Constables, and School Directors for the several districts; also to take the vote upon the question of calling a Constitutional Convention.

The following named persons are appointed Special Deputies to hold said election and make due returns according to law: 1st District—(Winchester)—T. N. Arledge, G. E. Banks, J. H. Taylor, 2d District—(Decherd)—J. H. Taylor, 3d District—Joe Vanzandt, 4th District—W. J. Coombs, 5th District—J. S. Coombs, 6th District—Back Gregory, 7th District—Berry Kinbrey, 8th District—W. T. Hart, 9th District—George Gibson, 10th District—(Cowan)—H. H. Cowan, 11th District—(Greenhaw)—Knox Champion, 12th District—A. J. Skidmore, 13th District—Wm. Gibson, Esq., 14th District—J. A. Silvertooth, 15th District—Henry Bell, 16th District—Lam Crevier, 17th District—W. L. Jones, 18th District—R. J. Gillespie.

This June 26th, 1882. J. P. WEDDINGTON, Coroner Franklin Co.

Public Sale.

Clem. Arledge, adm'r of the estate of Jesse Arledge, dec'd, vs. J. S. Counts and wife, T. N. Arledge et als. By virtue of a decree of the County Court of Franklin county, Tenn., pronounced at its May Term, 1882, in the above cause, I will, as Special Commissioner, on Monday, July 24th, 1882, at the Courthouse door in Winchester, sell to the highest bidder, on a credit of one, two and three years, (except the sum of ten per cent. in cash to be paid on day of sale,) the following described tracts of land, to-wit: Tract No. 1, known as the Owl Hollow Mill Tract, situated in civil district No. 1 of said county, containing 300 acres. The bidding on this tract to begin at $8.334 per acre.

Tract No. 2, being a part of the Owl Hollow tract, situated in the same district, containing 232 acres, 2 roads and 33 poles. Bidding to begin at $1.50 per acre.

Tract No. 3, being a part of the Owl Hollow tract, situated in same district, containing 143 acres and 3 poles. Bidding to begin at $1.50 per acre.

Tract No. 4, being a part of Owl Hollow tract, situated in same district, containing 160 acres and 104 poles. Bidding to begin at $1.50 per acre.

Tract No. 5, known as the Ash Camp Hollow tract, situated in district No. 15, containing 400 acres and poles. Bidding to begin at $3.00 per acre.

Tract No. 6, situated near Farris' Church and adjoining the lands of Thomas Holt, B. Crisman et als, in district No. 15, containing 179 acres, more or less. The bidding on this tract to begin at $1.00 per acre. A plat, giving boundaries and full description of each tract, will be exhibited on day of sale. Two or more good and sufficient securities will be required of purchaser, and a lien retained until the purchase money is paid. Sale within lawful hours. This June 21st, 1882. M. C. FORBES, Special Commissioner.

Decherd Items.

The wheat crop in this section is all harvested, and is now being threshed. Two threshers are running in this neighborhood. Messrs. Knights & Bostick are running a horse-power, and Bennett, Heikens & Co. are running a steam power. The steam power will thresh on an average about one bushel per minute. Mr. Bennett will finish his crop to-day, which will exceed one thousand bushels. Wheat, so far as threshed, turns out about ten bushels per acre.

Farmers are very busy now attending to their grain crops. The weather is exceedingly warm, and men and stock suffer from it. What has become of all the candidates? They must be lying around in the cool places this hot weather. We have not seen but one or two about Decherd in a week or so.

Quite a young couple called upon us yesterday, but as it was, who wished to be united in wedlock. After producing the proper papers, we performed the ceremony and sent them on their way rejoicing. The names of the parties—Jackson Gann and Kissie Bradford. The Democrats here are very much pleased with the action of the late Convention in the nomination of Gen. Wm. B. Bate as our standard-bearer and candidate for Governor.

President Arthur has appointed as tariff commissioners just such men as will do the will of the protective monopolists, and there will be no reform of the tariff laws.

The widow of the late Capt. James M. Davis, who was killed near McMinnville a few months since, has received the $14,000 insurance on his life.

All subscribers who see a cross mark on the margin of their paper this week will please understand that it means that we are in need of money, and that their time is "out and over," and they ought to come up and pay up, and continue their county paper.

Non-Resident Notice.

In Circuit Court of Franklin County, Tennessee. Joseph M. Aeklen vs. E. P. Aeklen and others.

In this case it appearing to the satisfaction of the Court from the bill of complaint, Mrs. E. P. Aeklen, — Bogwell and wife S. P. Bagwell, J. O. Aeklen, M. A. Aeklen, S. P. Aeklen, E. J. Aeklen, — McEldeith and wife E. P. McEldeith, and C. M. Aeklen, are non-residents of the State of Tennessee, so that the ordinary process of law cannot be served upon them.

It is therefore ordered by me that publication be made for four consecutive weeks in the Home Journal, published in Winchester, Tenn., requiring said non-resident defendants to appear at the next term of the Circuit Court for Franklin county, at the Courthouse in Winchester, Tenn., on the 14th Monday in July, 1882, and make defence to said bill, or the same will be taken for confessed to him, and set for hearing ex-parte as is herein.

Witness my hand, at office, this June 21st, 1882. H. P. STEWART, Clerk. By Frank Lettler, D. C.

Administrator's Notice.

All parties indebted to the estate of J. W. Hays, dec'd, are requested to pay the same to me immediately; and having claims against said estate must present the same to me forthwith. G. A. MAYHEW, Adm'r, with will annexed. Sewanee, Tenn., June 21, 1882. 4w

Executor's Notice.

All parties indebted to the estate of Lewis Anderson, dec'd, must make settlement with the undersigned; and those having claims against the estate must present the same to us for settlement. J. C. ANDERSON, J. C. ANDERSON, Executors. June 21, 1882. 1m Delinquent Tax Notice!

ON THE FIRST MONDAY IN JULY, 1882, At the Courthouse door in Winchester, Tenn., I will offer, at public sale, the real estate belonging to the delinquent tax-payers of Franklin county, Tenn., a description of which will be given as soon upon my books in my office. Taxes for 1881. This May 21st, 1882. R. G. SMITH, Trustee. may21-tds

MILLINERY!

Mrs. N. E. Days & Sister, At their residence, have a stock of MILLINERY GOODS that cannot fail to please the most fastidious, and at prices that defy competition. Ladies' Hats and Bonnets—latest style. Beautiful Trimmings, Laces and Flowers.

Elegant Hosiery and Kid Gloves. All the latest and most desirable articles in the Millinery line. They respectfully invite the attention of the ladies of Winchester and vicinity to their stock and prices.

FRANKLIN TYPE FOUNDRY.

263 Pine Street, Cincinnati, Ohio. ALLISON, SMITH & JOHNSON. The type on which this notice is printed is of their manufacture.

The Winchester Normal.

For Both Sexes. A LEADER and model in educational work. Other schools follow, the Normal leads; others copy, the Normal originates. Many features can be found in the schools and colleges around us borrowed from the Normal. The boasted progress of these schools is simply "We are doing as the Normal does." Even some old colleges, whose pride heretofore has been their prestige, their age, their born or experienced teachers, their course of Latin and Greek, show recently great anxiety to be thought "up with the times"—to be thought in favor of a more "practical" education. What has caused this great awakening? Whence this new energy and work? Let the truth be spoken—the Normal has necessitated it. We are glad to note the advance made by our schools, but it is not the "sheerest folly" for them, while following the Normal "star off," to claim equality with her? It is both wise and safe to maintain the leading position. As a one might the changes of the past few years to which guarantee steady progress in the years to come. Such is the Winchester Normal.

THE TEACHERS are young, earnest and progressive men and women, who bring to the Normal a college education, are not chosen for their ability to teach. Many worthless teachers, with long titles and loud diplomas, find easy seats and secure hiding-places in the old colleges. Such seldom reform their habits prevent progress. Teachers need to be made, as well as born, and that is what the Normal does in what they teach, but speaking of the Normal, the Normal, too, is the fresh and vigor imparted to the work by the student-teachers. The fact that any student may be called on to drill a detachment from a class, or conduct the recitation, or even take for a limited time a class, gives an inspiration to study and brings to the work a self-propelling enthusiasm unknown in the old schools. The students thus become co-workers with the teachers, and mutual helpers of one another in their investigations. Those teachers whose conception of the work is to be a mere "drill" and "rote" are being reeducated in the old-fashioned way. The end of all teaching is to encourage and stimulate to self-activity. "All true education is self-education." The old schools cannot use their students as assistants, because their teachers lack skill and their work vital. Thus from teachers and undisciplined methods, which teach as you may, are unequal to this work. They cannot cope with the feature of the Normal; hence they die to their own shame.

The teachers in the Normal possess individuality—do their work in their own way. Methods constantly change. The basal principles of education and teaching are axiomatic and eternal. The same teacher uses different methods. The same teacher uses a variety of methods. The teachers in the Normal are no mere imitators, but discoverers, originators. While teachers here are free as to the methods they use, yet one thing is required of them—originality. Neither diploma nor certificate entitles a teacher to a position of honor and highly-lauded Alma Mater, can here secure to teachers position and character. Teachers in the Normal must produce results. Teachers may be born, but success is wrought. The Normal makes her teachers, too, successful by teaching it.

THE COURSE OF STUDY is extensive, flexible and practical. Students can pursue what they need, but must do thoroughly. The higher attainments. Schools should first be made for citizenship. The old plan—Freshman, Sophomore, Junior and Senior, with five or six studies for slow and quick in the same time—does not meet the demand of the times. Those schools that adhere to this plan cannot live. They may boast their hundreds of students and graduates, but these in the business of life have learned that their Alma Mater lacks modern ideas and does not meet modern necessities. Hence these representatives fail to send back patronage, though the institution be begging piteously for existence. Such are living witnesses that the higher education of the old colleges is wholly disconnected from the work of life, and that the education received in them is a total failure. They may see that the "higher education" without the foundation well laid is indeed a "castle in the air." They have learned in the "dear school of experience" that to give one-half or three-fourths of one's school life to Latin and Greek is a great educational waste and mistake; but these in the business of life have learned that their Alma Mater lacks modern ideas and does not meet modern necessities. Hence these representatives fail to send back patronage, though the institution be begging piteously for existence. Such are living witnesses that the higher education of the old colleges is wholly disconnected from the work of life, and that the education received in them is a total failure. They may see that the "higher education" without the foundation well laid is indeed a "castle in the air." They have learned in the "dear school of experience" that to give one-half or three-fourths of one's school life to Latin and Greek is a great educational waste and mistake; but these in the business of life have learned that their Alma Mater lacks modern ideas and does not meet modern necessities. Hence these representatives fail to send back patronage, though the institution be begging piteously for existence. Such are living witnesses that the higher education of the old colleges is wholly disconnected from the work of life, and that the education received in them is a total failure. They may see that the "higher education" without the foundation well laid is indeed a "castle in the air." They have learned in the "dear school of experience" that to give one-half or three-fourths of one's school life to Latin and Greek is a great educational waste and mistake; but these in the business of life have learned that their Alma Mater lacks modern ideas and does not meet modern necessities. Hence these representatives fail to send back patronage, though the institution be begging piteously for existence. Such are living witnesses that the higher education of the old colleges is wholly disconnected from the work of life, and that the education received in them is a total failure. They may see that the "higher education" without the foundation well laid is indeed a "castle in the air." They have learned in the "dear school of experience" that to give one-half or three-fourths of one's school life to Latin and Greek is a great educational waste and mistake; but these in the business of life have learned that their Alma Mater lacks modern ideas and does not meet modern necessities. Hence these representatives fail to send back patronage, though the institution be begging piteously for existence. Such are living witnesses that the higher education of the old colleges is wholly disconnected from the work of life, and that the education received in them is a total failure. They may see that the "higher education" without the foundation well laid is indeed a "castle in the air." They have learned in the "dear school of experience" that to give one-half or three-fourths of one's school life to Latin and Greek is a great educational waste and mistake; but these in the business of life have learned that their Alma Mater lacks modern ideas and does not meet modern necessities. Hence these representatives fail to send back patronage, though the institution be begging piteously for existence. Such are living witnesses that the higher education of the old colleges is wholly disconnected from the work of life, and that the education received in them is a total failure. They may see that the "higher education" without the foundation well laid is indeed a "castle in the air." They have learned in the "dear school of experience" that to give one-half or three-fourths of one's school life to Latin and Greek is a great educational waste and mistake; but these in the business of life have learned that their Alma Mater lacks modern ideas and does not meet modern necessities. Hence these representatives fail to send back patronage, though the institution be begging piteously for existence. Such are living witnesses that the higher education of the old colleges is wholly disconnected from the work of life, and that the education received in them is a total failure. They may see that the "higher education" without the foundation well laid is indeed a "castle in the air." They have learned in the "dear school of experience" that to give one-half or three-fourths of one's school life to Latin and Greek is a great educational waste and mistake; but these in the business of life have learned that their Alma Mater lacks modern ideas and does not meet modern necessities. Hence these representatives fail to send back patronage, though the institution be begging piteously for existence. Such are living witnesses that the higher education of the old colleges is wholly disconnected from the work of life, and that the education received in them is a total failure. They may see that the "higher education" without the foundation well laid is indeed a "castle in the air." They have learned in the "dear school of experience" that to give one-half or three-fourths of one's school life to Latin and Greek is a great educational waste and mistake; but these in the business of life have learned that their Alma Mater lacks modern ideas and does not meet modern necessities. Hence these representatives fail to send back patronage, though the institution be begging piteously for existence. Such are living witnesses that the higher education of the old colleges is wholly disconnected from the work of life, and that the education received in them is a total failure. They may see that the "higher education" without the foundation well laid is indeed a "castle in the air." They have learned in the "dear school of experience" that to give one-half or three-fourths of one's school life to Latin and Greek is a great educational waste and mistake; but these in the business of life have learned that their Alma Mater lacks modern ideas and does not meet modern necessities. Hence these representatives fail to send back patronage, though the institution be begging piteously for existence. Such are living witnesses that the higher education of the old colleges is wholly disconnected from the work of life, and that the education received in them is a total failure. They may see that the "higher education" without the foundation well laid is indeed a "castle in the air." They have learned in the "dear school of experience" that to give one-half or three-fourths of one's school life to Latin and Greek is a great educational waste and mistake; but these in the business of life have learned that their Alma Mater lacks modern ideas and does not meet modern necessities. Hence these representatives fail to send back patronage, though the institution be begging piteously for existence. Such are living witnesses that the higher education of the old colleges is wholly disconnected from the work of life, and that the education received in them is a total failure. They may see that the "higher education" without the foundation well laid is indeed a "castle in the air." They have learned in the "dear school of experience" that to give one-half or three-fourths of one's school life to Latin and Greek is a great educational waste and mistake; but these in the business of life have learned that their Alma Mater lacks modern ideas and does not meet modern necessities. Hence these representatives fail to send back patronage, though the institution be begging piteously for existence. Such are living witnesses that the higher education of the old colleges is wholly disconnected from the work of life, and that the education received in them is a total failure. They may see that the "higher education" without the foundation well laid is indeed a "castle in the air." They have learned in the "dear school of experience" that to give one-half or three-fourths of one's school life to Latin and Greek is a great educational waste and mistake; but these in the business of life have learned that their Alma Mater lacks modern ideas and does not meet modern necessities. Hence these representatives fail to send back patronage, though the institution be begging piteously for existence. Such are living witnesses that the higher education of the old colleges is wholly disconnected from the work of life, and that the education received in them is a total failure. They may see that the "higher education" without the foundation well laid is indeed a "castle in the air." They have learned in the "dear school of experience" that to give one-half or three-fourths of one's school life to Latin and Greek is a great educational waste and mistake; but these in the business of life have learned that their Alma Mater lacks modern ideas and does not meet modern necessities. Hence these representatives fail to send back patronage, though the institution be begging piteously for existence. Such are living witnesses that the higher education of the old colleges is wholly disconnected from the work of life, and that the education received in them is a total failure. They may see that the "higher education" without the foundation well laid is indeed a "castle in the air." They have learned in the "dear school of experience" that to give one-half or three-fourths of one's school life to Latin and Greek is a great educational waste and mistake; but these in the business of life have learned that their Alma Mater lacks modern ideas and does not meet modern necessities. Hence these representatives fail to send back patronage, though the institution be begging piteously for existence. Such are living witnesses that the higher education of the old colleges is wholly disconnected from the work of life, and that the education received in them is a total failure. They may see that the "higher education" without the foundation well laid is indeed a "castle in the air." They have learned in the "dear school of experience" that to give one-half or three-fourths of one's school life to Latin and Greek is a great educational waste and mistake; but these in the business of life have learned that their Alma Mater lacks modern ideas and does not meet modern necessities. Hence these representatives fail to send back patronage, though the institution be begging piteously for existence. Such are living witnesses that the higher education of the old colleges is wholly disconnected from the work of life, and that the education received in them is a total failure. They may see that the "higher education" without the foundation well laid is indeed a "castle in the air." They have learned in the "dear school of experience" that to give one-half or three-fourths of one's school life to Latin and Greek is a great educational waste and mistake; but these in the business of life have learned that their Alma Mater lacks modern ideas and does not meet modern necessities. Hence these representatives fail to send back patronage, though the institution be begging piteously for existence. Such are living witnesses that the higher education of the old colleges is wholly disconnected from the work of life, and that the education received in them is a total failure. They may see that the "higher education" without the foundation well laid is indeed a "castle in the air." They have learned in the "dear school of experience" that to give one-half or three-fourths of one's school life to Latin and Greek is a great educational waste and mistake; but these in the business of life have learned that their Alma Mater lacks modern ideas and does not meet modern necessities. Hence these representatives fail to send back patronage, though the institution be begging piteously for existence. Such are living witnesses that the higher education of the old colleges is wholly disconnected from the work of life, and that the education received in them is a total failure. They may see that the "higher education" without the foundation well laid is indeed a "castle in the air." They have learned in the "dear school of experience" that to give one-half or three-fourths of one's school life to Latin and Greek is a great educational waste and mistake; but these in the business of life have learned that their Alma Mater lacks modern ideas and does not meet modern necessities. Hence these representatives fail to send back patronage, though the institution be begging piteously for existence. Such are living witnesses that the higher education of the old colleges is wholly disconnected from the work of life, and that the education received in them is a total failure. They may see that the "higher education" without the foundation well laid is indeed a "castle in the air." They have learned in the "dear school of experience" that to give one-half or three-fourths of one's school life to Latin and Greek is a great educational waste and mistake; but these in the business of life have learned that their Alma Mater lacks modern ideas and does not meet modern necessities. Hence these representatives fail to send back patronage, though the institution be begging piteously for existence. Such are living witnesses that the higher education of the old colleges is wholly disconnected from the work of life, and that the education received in them is a total failure. They may see that the "higher education" without the foundation well laid is indeed a "castle in the air." They have learned in the "dear school of experience" that to give one-half or three-fourths of one's school life to Latin and Greek is a great educational waste and mistake; but these in the business of life have learned that their Alma Mater lacks modern ideas and does not meet modern necessities. Hence these representatives fail to send back patronage, though the institution be begging piteously for existence. Such are living witnesses that the higher education of the old colleges is wholly disconnected from the work of life, and that the education received in them is a total failure. They may see that the "higher education" without the foundation well laid is indeed a "castle in the air." They have learned in the "dear school of experience" that to give one-half or three-fourths of one's school life to Latin and Greek is a great educational waste and mistake; but these in the business of life have learned that their Alma Mater lacks modern ideas and does not meet modern necessities. Hence these representatives fail to send back patronage, though the institution be begging piteously for existence. Such are living witnesses that the higher education of the old colleges is wholly disconnected from the work of life, and that the education received in them is a total failure. They may see that the "higher education" without the foundation well laid is indeed a "castle in the air." They have learned in the "dear school of experience" that to give one-half or three-fourths of one's school life to Latin and Greek is a great educational waste and mistake; but these in the business of life have learned that their Alma Mater lacks modern ideas and does not meet modern necessities. Hence these representatives fail to send back patronage, though the institution be begging piteously for existence. Such are living witnesses that the higher education of the old colleges is wholly disconnected from the work of life, and that the education received in them is a total failure. They may see that the "higher education" without the foundation well laid is indeed a "castle in the air." They have learned in the "dear school of experience" that to give one-half or three-fourths of one's school life to Latin and Greek is a great educational waste and mistake; but these in the business of life have learned that their Alma Mater lacks modern ideas and does not meet modern necessities. Hence these representatives fail to send back patronage, though the institution be begging piteously for existence. Such are living witnesses that the higher education of the old colleges is wholly disconnected from the work